

ENCAPSULATED PIN STRUCTURE FOR IMPROVED RELIABILITY OF WAFER

Abstract

A solder bump for bonding an electronic device to a substrate or another structure is formed by plating a high aspect ratio copper pin on a supporting structure, encapsulating the pin in a barrier material, plating a solder on the barrier material and then reflowing the solder.